2007 Statement of Program Service Accomplishments

I. Land Conservation Program. WLT funds land purchase and land manamgent that support some of the most endangered species and habitats in the Americas. We have granted more than $850,000 this year to local organizations to buy and manage reserves of exceptional biodiversity value, often buying land at prices of $100 per acre or less.

Fundación Jocotoco, Ecuador. WLT-US donors funded critical acquisitions totalling $140,000 at Yunguilla, Tapichalaca, Jorupe, Yanacocha, and Buenaventura Reserves, as well as providing operating support of $120,000 for management of these reserves. Fundación Jocotoco owns and operates reserves that protect the habitats of over a dozen species of critically endangered birds. It hires local park guards to patrol and manage the reserves and to work with local communities so that they better understand, support, and benefit from the Foundation's programs. The foundation also undertakes programs in research, reforestation, and other activities to support conservation. WLT-US raises funds each year so that more lands can be added to the reserves to insure their biodiversity.

The Reserva Ecologica de Guapiaçu (REGUA), in Brazil protects one of the last large tracts of tropical forest left in the severely depleted Atlantic Rainforest (Mata Atlantica) of eastern Brazil. REGUA is home to at least 420 species of birds—of which 120 are endemic to the coastal Atlantic Rain Forest biome—as well as mammals such as woolly spider monkey and puma. WLT-US donors contributed towards the purchase of 1,000 hectares, supported the restoration of a large wetland area that had been drained and turned into pasture thirty years ago, and assisted with the reintroduction of the critically endangered Red-billed Curassow. WLT is now trying to raise the funds for eight additional land acquisition projects. ($50,000)

Fazenda Almas, Brazil. WLT-US is working with Associação Plantas do Nordeste to protect 3,505 hectares (8,650 acres) of undisturbed caatinga habitat at Fazenda Almas, with excellent representation of the native floristic diversity, much of which is endemic. Although the arid caatinga is northeastern Brazil's prevalent vegetation, virtually all the land has been converted to other uses or so over-grazed that the original beauty and species diversity has been lost. If we are successful in raising the needed funds, this will become the largest reserve of undisturbed caatinga in the Brazilian state of Paraíba. ($25,000)

Sierra de Alamos Reserve, Mexico. WLT-US provided the funds to purchase 1,200 acres in 2007 to expand Nature and Culture International's private reserve within the Sierra de Alamos in northern Mexico to 14,000 acres. This reserve protects the northernmost tropical deciduous forest in the Americas, a highly diverse but endangered ecosystem that used to extend from Sonora to southern Central America, but is now highly fragmented. This biome is important for its many endemic species, as well as providing wintering habitat for neotropical migratory birds. Conservation activities focus on land purchase and management, scientific research, and community involvement programs. ($50,000)

Cloud Forests, Ecuador. We are protecting cloud forests in the tropical Andes, the worlds foremost conservation priority astonishing variety of hummingbirds, tanagers, and other rare fauna and flora, through land purchase with the Mindo Cloud Forest Foundation ($12,000); at the Bilsa reserve in Esmeraldas with Jatun Sacha Fdtn ($35,000); and at the Cosanga Valley with Napo Andean Forest Fdtn ($30,000).

Fundación Avifauna Eugene Eisenmann, Panama. Thanks to generous donors, WLT-US has helped the international effort to build the Panama Rainforest Discovery Center near the biologically diverse Soberanian National Park at the Panama Canal. This state-of-the art facility will promote conservation of rainforest habitat to the canal's international visitors and the millions of Panamanians who live close by. ($241,000).

The San Rafael Reserve in southeastern Paraguay is one of the most important tracts of Atlantic Forest remaining in Paraguay. More than 310 bird species have been recorded there, 11 of them globally threatened. These forests also protect a watershed of the Paraguay-Paraná river system that is important for the survival of the indigenous cultures remaining in the Paraguayan Atlantic Forest. Donors to WLT provided the funds to Guyra Paraguay to buy 1,500 acres of beautiful forested land and natural savannas at $100 per acre in 2007. Eventually, Guyra Paraguay and partner organizations plan to purchase and protect 40,000 acres as a core private reserve. ($135,000)

II. Our Biodiversity Program with the E.O. Wilson Foundation supports a program to undertake public educational, scientific and programmatic activities to educate the public about and conserve biological diversity. ($245,000)

III. Our Sustainable Finance project supports Naturaleza y Cultura Ecuador's work to develop a sustainable funding source for conservation and sustainable development initiatives for the forests of the Andes. These forests provide an abundant water resource, yet most of these forested areas are threatened by the lack of a sustainable funding source to pay for their management and protection. WLT seeks to help Ecuadorian groups harness the economic potential of this water resource, by assessing the benefits of developing run-of-river hydropower projects in the Andes of southern Ecuador, that would fund entirely non-profit conservation initiatives. ($575,000).
